21. General architectural description:
Oriented to the northeast, this cabin rests on a random-coursed granite foundation. Unpeeled, vertical split-log siding clads the exterior walls. Windows are generally paired, single-light casement, with brown-painted wood frames. The principal doorway opens near the center of the nearly symmetrical front (northeast) elevation. It hosts a brown-painted, single-panel, single-light wood door, opening behind a wood-frame storm door. The doorway provides access to a small shed roof porch protruding from the center of the façade. It has split-log kneewalls as well as long posts and beams. Five wood steps approach the porch on its northwest end. A larger, front-gable porch dominates the northwestern end of the southwest elevation. It has high, peeled-log kneewalls as well as log posts and beams. A single step approaches the porch on its northeast elevation. The porch does not shelter a doorway. Both porches lack formal foundations. Sheets of brown asphalt cover the front-gabled roof, and the rafter ends are exposed.

23. Landscape or special setting features:

This property is located on an east-west-oriented ridge top, at an elevation of over 8,600 feet above mean sea level. Houses are irregularly spaced along Coal Creek Canyon Drive (Colorado State Highway 72), with this house actually located on a packed-earth road many yards from the highway. This property is relatively flat, with dense stands of pines and aspens. A packed-earth driveway approaches the north corner of the house.

24. Associated building, features or objects:

Privy

A privy is located northeast of the house. Oriented to the west, the building appears to lack a formal foundation. The walls consist of red-painted, vertical planks. A narrow doorway dominates the west elevation. The roof is front gabled.

35. Historical background:

The original owner of this property was Primo "Pete" Gilli, who purchased the parcel from Mary A. Hollingsworth, wife of Wondervu developer Charles E. Hollingsworth, in 1948. Pete P. Gilli was born on March 28, 1908, in Colorado to parents who immigrated from Tyrol, then a largely German-speaking region disputed between Austria and Italy. Gilli resided in Denver where he worked as a cabinetmaker. Deeds suggest that Gilli bought the property and built the cabin himself on speculation. He sold the cabin in 1950 and died in Denver on February 11, 1993.

Purchasing the property from Pete Gilli where William G. and Ruby E. Taylor, of Adams County, Colorado. The Taylors sold this cabin and lots to Elmer J. and Lila E. Hoback in 1968. The Hobacks were both born in Nebraska, Elmer on April 10, 1907 and Lila on November 11, 1913, in Nebraska. They resided in Lincoln, Nebraska, before settling in Westminster, Colorado, where Elmer died in July 1979 and Lila in June 1995.

Robert F. and Doris L. Gardner purchased this property from the Hobacks in 1974. Robert died in 1985, leaving the cabin and lots to Doris, who sold them to the current owner, Timothy L. Burnett, in 2007.

39. Areas of significance: Architecture

40. Period(s) of Significance: 1950

41. Level of Significance: National State Local Not Applicable

42. Statement of Significance:

This cabin is architecturally significant as an example of the Rustic style. Character-defining features include unpeeled, vertical split-log siding; a random-coursed native granite foundation; and exposed log rafter ends. However, because of the cabin's moderately low level of physical integrity and overall lack of notable historical or architectural significance, this property should not be considered individually eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places, the Colorado State Register of Historic Properties, or as a Boulder County Landmark.

43. Assessment of historic physical integrity related to significance:

Constructed in 1950, this cabin exhibits a moderately low level of physical integrity relative to the seven aspects of integrity as defined by the National Park Service and the Colorado Historical Society: location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. The replacement of original windows and doors has removed critical character-defining features. This building does not retain sufficient physical integrity to convey its historical and architectural significance.
